

SUMMARY

Viktoria Bakula. The names of the Sami clothes

The author describes traditional Sami winter and summer clothes, headwear and footwear and deals with three historical stages of the Sami costume. The author describes differential features of different types of traditional Sami clothes, headwear and footwear with the basis on the analysis of ethnographic and linguistic data.

Keywords: the Sami language, the Peninsular Sami dialects (the Kola dialects), Sami, traditional clothes, traditional headwear, traditional footwear

Maria Bezenova (Kaysina). Phonetic features of the Udmurt religious texts of the first half of the XIX century in comparison with the modern dialects

The article represents the analysis of six religious written monuments in Udmurt of the first half of the 19th century. Taking into account the data of these sources, the author attempts to describe phonetic features of the Glazov and Sarapul dialects of this period and compare them with the modern Udmurt dialects.

Keywords: the Udmurt language, Gospel, Alphabets, dialects, phonetic features

Natalia Dubrovskaya. The peculiarities of semantic derivation of noun structure in Selkup

The article presents the first proposal of the investigation of the peculiarities of semantic derivation of noun structure in Selkup. It studies the Selkup nouns with a special type of semantic derivation, intermediate between monosemy and polysemy, which can be identified as “unaccomplished polysemy”. Here we use the data of the Selkup language and compare them with those of different languages of the Uralic family, as well as with those of genetically different languages of aboriginal nations of the Russian Federation.

Keywords: Selkup, semantic derivation, semantic structure, polysemy, monosemy, “unaccomplished polysemy”

Fedor Dyachkovski, Natalia Popova. Alaas as a concept of the Yakut (Sakha) linguoculture

In the article alaas is considered as a linguocultural concept traditionally associated with nature, lifestyle and household economic features of the area inhabited by the Yakut (Sakha) language speakers.

Keywords: the Yakut (Sakha) language, cultural linguistics, concept, language world picture

Elena Napolnova. Demonstrative pronouns in Turkish

The author investigates the use of the demonstrative pronouns bu, şu and o in the modern Turkish language in spatial and time deixis, non-deixis situation and anaphora with different types of objects. The author also deals with the functional specificity of the pronoun şu.

Keywords: Turkish, demonstratives (deictic words), demonstrative pronouns, deixis, anaphora

Maria Chertykova. Antonymous and synonymous correlation in the structure of the lexico-semantic group of the emotion verbs in Khakas (on the example of the verb groups of laughter and crying)

Article is devoted to identification and description of the paradigmatic relations of the verbs of emotion manifestation in the hierarchical structure of one lexico-semantic group in Khakas. During the semantic analysis of 13 verbs of laughter and 9 verbs of crying the differential semes are identified; on the basis of these semes synonymous and antonymous relations are considered.

Keywords: lexico-semantic group, verbs of laughter, verbs of crying, semantics, seme, synonymy, antonymy, Khakas

Lyubov Kara-ool. Igor V. Kormushin as a leading researcher of the Old Turkic runic texts of Siberia and Mongolia (to his 75th anniversary)

In the paper the author studies Igor Kormushin's role in the research on the Orkhon-Yenisey written script of Siberia and Mongolia.

Keywords: ancient Turkic written monuments, Orkhon-Yenisey written script, Yenisey epitaph, runic alphabet, texteme

Radion Sunchugashev. Mikhail I. Borgoyakov (1930—1983). To the 30th anniversary of his death

In the paper the author studies Mikhail Borgoyakov's role in the research on the Khakas language.

Keywords: the Khakas language, the Turkic languages, turkology, lexicon, grammar

Maria Bezenova (Kaysina). Dictionary of the Udmurt middle dialect

The vocabulary was collected in Vyl'ngurt village (Syumsinski district) of the Udmurt Republic (2013). The dialect of this village represents the middle dialects of Udmurt. The glossary includes original Permic vocabulary. The article also describes phonemic system and phonetic features of this dialect.

Keywords: Udmurt, dialects, field materials, original Permic vocabulary, phonetic features